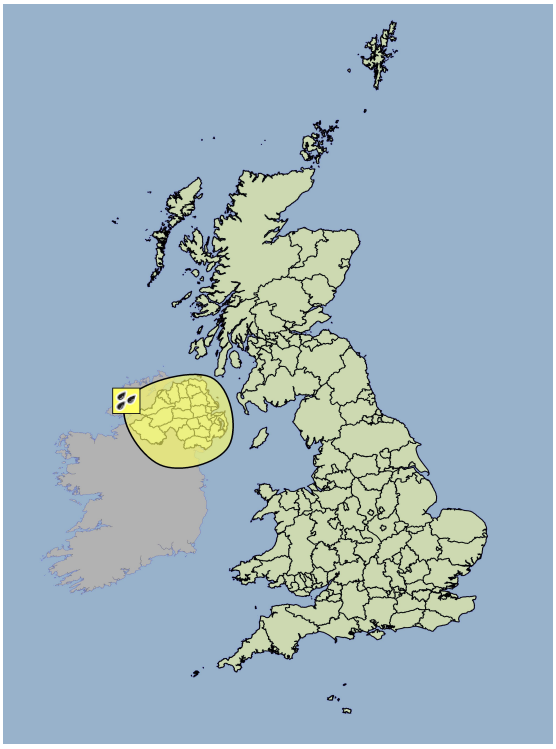
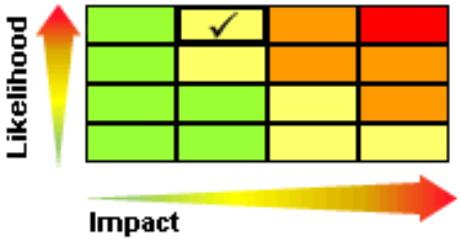
National Severe Weather Warning Service





Chief Forecasters Assessment
A frontal system containing a moist west to southwesterly airstream will become slow-moving over Northern Ireland during this period, before clearing away during Sunday evening. There will be some heavier outbreaks but it will be the persistence of the rainfall which will lead to some minor impacts. This will be mainly from standing water with amounts generally 20 to 40 mm, while locally exceeding 60 mm in the west.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Warning of Rain

Valid from 14:00 on Sat, 14th Nov 2015 until 18:00 on Sun, 15th Nov 2015

Persistent and heavy rain will spread across Northern Ireland during Saturday, continuing on Saturday night and during much of Sunday.

Please be aware that this will lead to difficult driving conditions and could cause localised flooding, particularly in the west.
